If you're looking for a place to spend the Christmas holiday, we try to cover possible information within the posts on our site online. Here are some hotels and resorts that shine over the holiday.

Big Cedar Lodge

Its annual show, Home for the Holidays, features a series of events in November and December, including ice-skating and kids' club activities. Guest rooms, cottages and cabins serve as cozy spots for winter getaways, and many dining options mean you'll never need to leave the resort.

Aspen Meadows Resort

There are all kinds of festivities at the resort leading up to the big day, including snowmen building and sleigh rides. Holiday movie nights take place throughout December, and there's lots of food to enjoy. The all-suites are perfect for family getaways with floor-to-ceiling windows providing mountain views.

Hotel Bennett

Visit this hotel for Christmas and you'll immediately be surprised by the life-size gingerbread(姜饼) house made with pounds of candy. There are holiday stories on the night before Christmas Eve. Plus, all of the holiday festivities in Charleston's downtown are just outside this hotel's front door.

Jekyll Island Club Resort

At Christmastime, this historic resort hosts a gingerbread house decorating event and special holiday meals throughout December. About 350 light displays made up of more than a million lights can be seen in the resort's trees.

23. What do the listed places have in common?
- A. They are located in the downtown.
  - B. They are all world-famous resorts.
  - C. They all have special holiday parties.
  - D. They all have activities before Christmas.

B

On July 28, I retired from my position. After teaching for many years, I looked forward to kayaking(划独木舟) with my grandsons, seeing friends and traveling for leisure with my husband. But my body had other plans for me. A broken spine(脊椎) in my back took me down a path that upended my plans.

I have long had back pain. However, I pushed through the pain to do my work, which worsened my condition. Doctors urged an operation when increased disability meant I could not sit, stand or walk for a long time. But I wanted to see whether physical therapy(治疗) could create an easier option.

Indeed, hard work with a great physical therapist has let me improve my mobility, sitting and standing. But X-rays told a different story. My spine was unstable and bending. After careful consideration and a second opinion from another professional, I agreed to surgery yet in the near term. Needless to say, the past months have been tough and the way ahead will be even tougher. Kayaking with my grandsons in the peacefulness of the lake is all out of reach, for now.

When I met my physical therapist for the first time, I was a mess. He listened to me outline my history with tears and then calmly said, "You have to make friends with your body." I have repeated that line to myself daily and worked to embrace my body. I have focused on gratitude. I'm grateful that I do not have a fatal disease. I'm grateful that the body I have remains alert to the world, loved by family and friends. I'm grateful that I am still myself.

I don't know exactly how the future will play out. The surgeon assures me that I should be able to get in my kayak by summer. But I may have to make friends with a different body, one that is mine regardless of the shape.

24. Why did the author's condition become worse?
- A. She disliked physical therapy.
  - B. She hurt her back when kayaking.
  - C. She still worked despite back pain.
  - D. She was unwilling to have an operation.
25. What can we learn about the author from paragraph 3?
- A. She forgot to kayak with her grandsons.
  - B. She decided to accept an operation right away.
  - C. She completely recovered after physical therapy.
  - D. She asked another doctor for advice on the operation.

26. What changed the author's attitude towards her body?
- A. Her physical therapist's advice.
  - B. Her wish to enjoy retirement life.
  - C. Her worsening physical condition.
  - D. Her love for her family and friends.
27. Which of the following is the most suitable title for the text?
- A. Enjoying my retirement life
  - B. Learning to accept my body
  - C. Fighting against my back pain
  - D. Being grateful for what I have

C

Remember Malcolm Gladwell's famous "10,000-hour rule" from his bestselling book Outliers? It proposes that achieving mastery in any field requires roughly 10,000 hours of practice, emphasizing the importance of early professionalization and intensive practice for becoming an elite (精英) in a particular field.

This approach, known as "deliberate practice (刻意训练)", encourages setting goals from a young age, investing time and specializing in a specific field. On paper, it sounds like a good path to success, but when we look at the lives of elite athletes, musicians and scholars, we find a different story. In reality, many individuals who have risen to the top of their respective fields took a more diverse and winding route. They often explored a wide range of activities, gained a broad skill set, and only specialized at a later stage in life. In other words, the idea that one must know one's specialization from a young age is fundamentally wrong.

Studies have shown that an approach called the "sampling period" is often more effective for achieving success. During this phase, individuals try various activities, gain diverse skills, identify their strengths and weaknesses, and only choose a field to specialize in once they have a clearer understanding of their passions and abilities.

Elite athletes, for example, rarely specialize in a single sport at a very young age. Instead, they engage in a variety of sports during their formative years, which allows them to acquire broad physical skills and discover their interests and talents. These early diversification experiences provide valuable lessons that can be applied to their chosen sports.

Consider the journey of Roger Federer, one of the greatest tennis players of all time. At the age of 6, he dabbled in rugby, skiing and wrestling, only returning to tennis later. The trial period benefited him not just because he found his true passion but also because his experiences in various sports enriched his tennis game with a unique set of skills.

28. What does the author think of "10,000-hour rule"?
- A. It's effective.
  - B. It's impractical.
  - C. It's costly.
  - D. It's unproven.

29 “Deliberate practice” stresses the importance of the following aspects except _

- A. early goal-setting
- B. focused practice
- C. diverse skills
- D. field specialization

30. Why is Roger Federer mentioned in the last paragraph?

- A. To show the difficulty to be an elite athlete.
- B. To prove the advantage of the “sampling period”.
- C. To give an example of applying “deliberate practice”.
- D. To tell us one of the greatest tennis players of all time./

31. Which statement would the author probably agree with?

- A. Kids should try many kinds of activities.
- B. Passion can be found at young age.
- C. Many failures can lead to successes.
- D. Learn to be an athlete since young.

D

Electrically powered vertical-take-off-and-landing(eVTOL) aircraft—flying cars are an idea whose time has not quite yet come, but is fast approaching. Many firms are offering various designs. None of these, however, will be Jetson-like family flying cars. Pivotal, based in Silicon Valley, by contrast has crafted something that people can purchase and pilot themselves. Helix is a single-seat vehicle, so “flying motorbike” might be more accurate. From next year, many people will be able to order one for personal use, though they will not be able to take delivery until June.

Marcus Leng founded Pivotal in 2011, and some back-of-the-envelope calculations he made suggested that electric lift-off of a human-carrying craft, using motors powered by the lithium-ion batteries ought to work. He thus built a model and flew it in the garden of his house in Warkworth, Ontario.

Now, after ameliorating it, the firm thinks it has something marketable. The aircraft has, nevertheless, changed little in its fundamentals over the years. It has two pairs of wings and eight propellers(螺旋桨), making it slightly resemble a squashed “H” when seen in the sky from below. And there is no undercarriage. Instead, its belly is curved in a way similar to a humpback whale’s, so it rocks to stability after landing.

Pilot’s licence or not, buyers will still need some training to fly a Helix. Pivotal insists on this. For the same reason, the craft’s software will stop the pilot doing anything that does not fit its safety rules. And if, despite this, something does go wrong, it is fitted with a parachute(降落伞).

The Helix’s top speed is a respectable 100 kph, but its range is only 30 km. And refueling it is a bit of a pain. Filling up from the mains takes four and a half hours, though a special high-power system similar to those employed for electric cars can bring that down to 75 minutes. While Helix still doesn't compare to the flying car from the Jetsons, it could be a step forward.

32. What can we learn from the first two paragraphs?

- A. Helix has been used in Warkworth widely.
- B. Flying cars won't be allowed for personal use.
- C. Leng was the first person to design flying cars.
- D. Helix is only suitable for one person to drive.

33. What does the underlined word "ameliorating" in paragraph 3 mean?

- A. Testing.
- B. Driving.
- C. Improving.
- D. Repairing.

34. What is paragraph 4 mainly about?

- A. Helix's relative devices.
- B. Helix's safety measures.
- C. Helix's training process.
- D. Helix's working principle.

35. What is the author's attitude towards Helix?

- A. Doubtful.
- B. Indifferent.
- C. Objective.
- D. Cautious.

My Understanding of Space Exploration

第二节 (满分 25 分)

阅读下面材料, 根据其内容和所给段落开头语续写两段, 使之构成一篇完整的短文。

Last summer, I had a life-changing experience when I decided to join a group of volunteers in rescuing homeless dogs. It all started when I read a post on social media about a group of abandoned dogs in desperate need of help. Without hesitation, I reached out to the organization leading the rescue mission.

Early one Saturday morning, our team gathered at a local animal shelter, armed with determination and a strong sense of purpose. We loaded the necessary supplies into our van, including food, water, blankets and leashes. As we set off, a mix of excitement and nervousness filled the air.

Our destination was a run-down area on the outskirts of town. The deserted streets were home to numerous homeless dogs, which had become victims of neglect. These innocent creatures, once someone's beloved pets, were now struggling to survive on their own. Upon arriving, our hearts sank at the sight of many poor dogs searching for food among the piles of garbage. It was a heartbreaking scene. We immediately sprang into action, spreading out to cover every corner of the neighborhood.

Approaching the dogs cautiously, we soon discovered that gaining their trust was not an easy task. Many had learned to fear humans after lasting unthinkable hardships. It took patience, gentle words and gestures to approach them without causing distress. With each successful rescue, our spirits were uplifted. Some dogs willingly followed us, desperate to escape their miserable lives. Others required a bit more comfort, but eventually, we managed to lead them to safety. They received medical attention and were provided with much-needed love.

As the days went by, our team experienced both moments of joy and heartache. Some dogs were fortunate enough to find loving homes, while others faced challenges due to their extremely unpleasant pasts. But through it all, we persisted, knowing that saving every life made a difference.

注意:

1. 续写词数应为 150 左右;
2. 请按如下格式在答题卡的相应位置作答。

Our efforts began to produce positive results.

Looking back on the summer, I am filled with a sense of pride and contentment.
